Green to Grow's Ongoing Commitment to Haiti

Dear Friends,

We are happy to announce Green to Grow has donated over $54,000 in BPA-free baby bottles and silicone nipples to hospitals, orphanages, camps, and families in Haiti during 2010.

Our first donation of over $44,000 was considered a medical necessity and was air lifted into Jacmel, Haiti by a group of pilots who volunteered their time and planes to deliver desperately needed goods to Hands and Feet Project. This was truly a grassroots effort, run entirely by volunteers who arranged for donations and scheduled at least two flights per day to deliver goods for weeks after the earthquake.

Our second donation of over $10,000 was made to J/P HRO, a camp founded by Sean Penn and Diana Jenkins with over 55,000 people on the grounds of the Petionville Club outside of Port au Prince.

As we look back at 2010, a year of global upheaval and difficulty, the generosity and commitment of our customers, partners, and friends provides hope and inspiration. We thank you for supporting our effort to promote social and environmental justice and to enrich the lives of families worldwide.

With gratitude,
Green to Grow
